Way back in 1991, a young couple by the names of Mark Thistle and Robyne Lyles kept running into people all around Baltimore who wanted a certain kind of high-trust transportation solution—the kind that didn't exist. That got their wheels turning, so to speak. And that's how FreedomCar started out... with a few cars, a few customers and two married kids who, fortunately, really liked to drive. So that's what they did. And they added a level of service that was as incomparable then as it is now. People were so happy, they told more people who told even more people and now FreedomCar boasts an extensive fleet of vehicles, thousands of customers and more than 50 employees.
